Kuśtyk is the “Representative of the Peasants” of the village of Sucha Woda.

A man in his forties, corpulent, with a dark moustache beginning to grey, he values his title and refuses that of village chief. His family is among the wealthiest in the village.

In his youth, he worked at Lord Grizmol's castle and still has almost unlimited access there. He stole a significant amount of gold from Grizmol’s coffers to repay a debt contracted with the moneylenders of Yanos.

He claims that his daughter Lelinka was kidnapped by the “Monster of the Cave,” who demands the return of the dowry before the fifth day of Velen. The letter delivered to the heroes is signed “The Monster of the Cave” and is a fragment with the top torn off.

He offers 200 orens for the safe return of his daughter.[1]
